Japanese Brand Automakers Celebrate their Enduring Partnerships across America
New Report Highlights $11 Billion in U.S. Manufacturing Investment and over 93,000 Direct U.S. Jobs

Washington, D.C. - Today, the Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association USA office (JAMA USA) released its 2019-2020 Annual Contributions Report, "JAMA IN AMERICA: An Enduring Partnership". The report shows that Japanese brand automakers now directly provide over 93,000 American jobs and in 2018 built nearly 3.7 million vehicles and 4.4 million engines in the U.S. Over nearly four decades, Japanese brand automakers have cumulatively invested about $11 billion in their U.S. manufacturing facilities.

"Today, Japanese brand automakers build one-third of all vehicles produced in the U.S.," said Masayuki Maruyama, General Director of JAMA USA. "Our success is the result of our members' partnership with generations of American work force talent to build cars and trucks that U.S. consumers love. This collaboration generates more than 1.1 million American jobs throughout the value chain - a footprint that reaches every state in the country."

"With new investments and a changing industry on the horizon, our members' top objective is to create affordable, fun, and innovative vehicles for current and future generations of drivers and their families. However, the U.S. administration's pursuit of automotive trade restrictions undermines the international competitiveness and healthy development of the American auto industry."

Below are key data points from the report:
